The variety of models and the distinctive smartness which characterizes them makes it possible for the most tends in a wide rippled tunic effect over critical of Washington women to find the skirt, and is edged with skunk. satisfaction in their home city. The reasonableness of this season's prices is another powerful inducement toward buying at home.

There are some lovely blouses to be had in the new combinations of silk or velvet and georgette crepe. model illustrated is a very faithful copy of one of the prettiest of imported creations, attractive for dress occasions. It illustrates the popular use of orange and black, now so much in vogue. Of orange crinkled chiffon, it is hand-embroidered in black silk. The chin-chin collar is of black chiffon velvet edged with gold lace. Black taffeta ribbons are shirred in a double row at the belt, giving the blouse an unusual and effective finish, and this trimming is repeated at the cuffs.

Another smart color combination is in navy and burgundy. Navy taffeta is used for the set-in yoke with points, the bodice effect at the front and back, and pointed cuffs piped in velvet. Burgundy georgette crepe richly embroidered in navy forms the foundation material. The novel feature of the waist is the buttoned back. Then there is a striking model in heavy navy charmeuse, with a vest of flesh-colored satin and a tucked band around both blouse and sleeve of the charmeuse. A high French collar and cuffs with rows of self-covered buttons are new and attractive. Black is very smart for sions. It illustrates the popular use of

The new skating dress is illustrated. It is of clinging navy crepe de chine, the high-rolled collar and pointed cuffs being faced with pearl gray satin. A novel trimming is achieved in the large fur buttons placed at intervals from the shoulder to the hem. Belted with a trimming of silver cord, this model has great distinction and charm. The skirt is, of course, draped, as are all smart skirts of the season, and also, of course, is edged with fur. The shops are at present giving a delightful display of skating costumes. Many of these are two-piece garments, the blouse of velvet, smocked or fashioned after the "middy" style, and the skirt of plaid or Roman striped silk. crepe. The underskirt and tunic are of accordian-plaited georgette, edged with bands of the velvet. An insert of silver lace gives a quaint touch to the bodice, and a white georgette chemisette relieves the coloring at the throat. A girdle of the velvet is loosely draped about the waist line. The two ends, which are allowed to hang, are finished off with fur. Against the background of the dark

THE CAUSE OF ANAEMIA

It is universally known that iron is a very important element of the blood, and lack of it is the direct cause of run-down conditions and anaemia. It may interest our readers to know that druggists of this town have in that druggists of this town have in Vinol a relable, constitutional remedy for such conditions. Vinol supplies from to the blood in its most soluble state, then there's the nourishing properties of beef peptone and the medicinal curative extractives of fresh cod livers, without oil, all dissolved in a pure native tonic wine. That's what makes Vinol so successful in overcoming run-down and anaemic conditions. P. S.—In your own town wherever you live, there is a Vinol irug store, look for the sign.—Advertisement.

BLACK AND GOLD BROCADE.
There is a bit of hand-embroidery in gold and navy which gives the note of distinction to the costume. Caught in to the figure, not too closely, by a soft sash, the silhouette is new and smart.
The Callot Soeurs, always famed for their sumptuous evening wraps, have made models more lovely than in several seasons, and the illustration shows a faithful copy of one of their most ral seasons, and the illustration shows a faithful copy of one of their most successful creations. It may be had in a Washington shop at a fraction of the price of the original model. The material is a rich black and gold brocade. The lines are simple, but wonderfully effective. A long rippled effect, failing in a profusion of ripples from the neck, is somewhat modified by the gold and black cord draped about the figure. Large cuffs and a halter collar of skunk add to the richness of the wrap, and a piquant ruffle of gold, georgette makes the collar very becoming. Warmly interlined throughout, this magnificent garment gives evidence that fashions may be practical as well as smart.

that fashions may be practical as well as smart.

A gorgeous shimmering wrap of nile green mother of pearl is being shown. It also follows the long, full-flare lines and is fastened at the front with a silk ornament of self-coler. A large shawl collar and cuffs of Iceland fox makes of it a truly adorable creation. It is lined with white brocade satin and heavily interlined.

Black velvet brocade on the very finest of chiffons is the material used in another model. The collar and cuffs are of skunk, and there is a wide band of the same fur around the bottom. Then there are broadcloth evening wraps in all of the delicate pastel shades, trimmed in white mountion, all heavily interlined. The prices range heavily interlined. The prices range from $37.50 to $135.00.

An exceptional afternoon dress is of field mouse chiffon velvet and georgette close-standing collars and belts at the waist line, you will find that many other wraps take on the Russian high neck, while they retain the high bust belt, which continues to be popular. The coat shown here is a simple pattern, easily made up, for the reason that the top and the skirt are separate and are joined beneath the belt. The sleeves are fitted and trimmed with the same buttons that fasten the front and decorate the pocket. This coat may be made up of velvet, corduroy, cloth of silk, for a dressy afternoon costume, or it may be made of any suitable woolen material for a coat suit. The style may be cut either in points or straight across, and the patch pockets are all the rage this winter. To be very fashionable one should add fur on the collar and cuffs, and fur belts also are very much in vogue. Such belts, however, have nothing to recommend them, as the fur belt makes the walst look very large and ungraceful.

As will be seen, the coat has a well defined armhole seam, and if made of same buttons that fasten the front and

To Mend a Tablecloth.

When holes begin to come on the edge of the cloth, pull a thread each side of the worn place and cut off carefully. This will leave the cloth without a border. Now place the raw edge of the border about an eighth of an inch above the edge of the cloth and carefully sew together. Next turn the edge under and stitch again, making a flat seam. The cloth will then be very presentable and good for some time longer.

VERSAILLES' INFLUENCE ON FASHIONS.

NEW YORK, November 16.—Versailles had a strong influence on the fashions this season. There were quite a few straws in the early summer to show that those in whose hands the destinies of apparel rested, were inclined toward the gorgeous period that prefaced the French suggestive of aimless frivolity. NEW YORK, November 16.-Versaille

They had touched upon the fashions of that other stormy epoch of French history, the second empire, but they did not intend to stay there; any one who knew the various experimental touches could tell from what direction the wind blew. which were really copies of portraits that hang in Versailles. Brocades, metal laces, looped skirts, deep square decohete bodices, were not a part and parcel of the Victorian days; they came nearer the portraits of our own colonial beauties. These fashions have developed strongly each week. Skirts are more and more ly each week. Skirts are more and more looped to resemble panniers, petticoats are more ela-orate and visible, waists are not altogether pointed in front; they have taken on that straight line from bust to an elongated waist line that was typical of the later Bourbons.

There are also many combinations of pink and blue, with dashes of silver lace and a vast variety of flowers. So far, the hair has not been powdered, but the coiffure has been slowly but securely drawn back from the forehead, to show the line of growth of the hair.

Worth's Dance Frocks. Worth has built a frock for dancing which is far away from the clothes of the near past. It would not have been considered last winter. Orientalism has held sway so long that it would have looked meaningless, milk-and-waterish. looked meaningless, milk-and-waterish. It is of pink taffeta, the very soft kind, over a petticoat of pink tulle. The plaiting in front holds in the fullness, as do the panniers at the sides. The bodice has a square decolletage with a surplice effect beneath gained through the management of the silk. There are bands of bright blue velvet ribbon over the shoulders and a band of pink roses across the bust. The dropped sleeves of pink tulle are weighted by a rose.

It seems strange, doesn't it, that in an era so bloody and passionate we should be adopting clothes that are suggestive of all the frivolities, of all the light touches of life; ephemeral, effervescent clothes that are as colorful, as sweep across the surface. Silver cobweb lace flashes in and out. All giving the grace of youth, of irresponsibility, the careless stepping of Folly in a primrose path.

Panniers Control Fullness.

To leap from generalizations into prosaic fact, the fullness brought about by the wide hem must be controlled in some fashion. This is the verdict of the better dressmakers. Women are Early in the spring there were gowns that were called Victorian, or civil war, sian or Victorian skirt with its width growing weary of the universal Russian or Victorian skirt with its width beginning at the hips and continuing in a straight line to the ankles. They want wide skirts, probably, or rather, they accept them, but they do not like the circular cut with its monotonous repetition in every phase of apparel.

Therefore, comes in the pannier, and the panel of pleating in front, or the cartridge pleat at the side or in the middle of the back. The panniers are the simplest and most graceful way to dispose of the fullness that is necessary to a wide hem. One sees them in various degrees of size.
